

Where to Get Free (and legal) Images

For Use with MSCRJ: Homeland Security

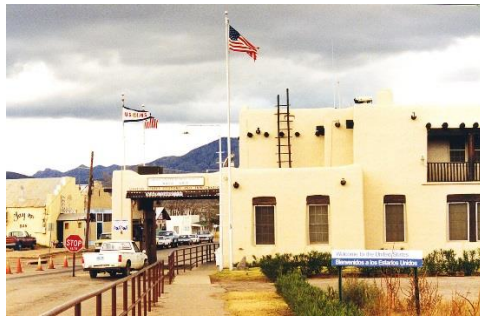

It can be difficult to find images that are guaranteed to be free to use. There are many sites that have some free images, but you have to hunt for them among all the fee-based images. Others allow you to download some free images but then force you to buy a membership to continue. Here are three sources of always free (and copyright free) photos and illustrations in the public domain or under creative commons license. You should always attribute the photo, however, by including the source. The images below were found using keyword searches on homeland security, border, terrorism, and infrastructure.

FLICKR CREATIVE COMMONS

<http://www.flickr.com/creativecommons/by-2.0/>

http://commons.wikimedia.org/wiki/Main_Page

www.freerangestock.com

[illegible]

If you find other great sources for copyright free images, please share with your classmates! This can easily be done by sharing the link through the Webliography tool in the top right of your classroom. Just click the button, enter your information, and click to share it.